WITH COURT BILL DEAD, COMMITTEE PLANS MILD REFORM

Congress Hastens to Complete Its Legislative Program

SEEK AN ADJOURNMENT

But Few Obstacles Now Appear in Path of Mid-August Finish

By William K. Hutchinson
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, July 23 — (INS) — With President Roosevelt's Supreme Court Bill dead and the Senate Judiciary Committee drafting a set of mild reforms for the lesser federal judiciary, Congress today hastened to complete its legislative program in hopes of adjourning August 15.

There appeared few obstacles in the path of the mid-August adjournment after the Senate killed the President's judicial bill by recommitting it under an agreement that will eliminate all proposed changes in the Supreme Court. The substitute, covering only minor federal courts, is being dictated by foes of the President's original bill.

The major program remaining before Congress included:

1. Passage of a new tax law for the District of Columbia, raising revenue to overcome a $7,000,000 deficit.

2. Action on the Black Labor Bill, limiting hours and fixing minimum wages in industries not covered by the Wagner Labor Act.

3. A new Wagner Housing Act, proposing a modest start in elimination of slum dwellings.

4. Extension of existing sugar import quotas, which otherwise would expire next January.

5. Passage of a bill, closing some of the tax loopholes revealed by the recent House-Senate Tax Inquiry.

6. Enactment possibly of an even-normal Granary Farm Bill, if committees of House and Senate can agree on a measure.

It appeared both the Black and Wagner acts would be rushed to enactment, since both have been sharply modified to meet objections. The Wagner act still is pending in a senate committee but is expected to receive a favorable report next week.

The Senate's five-month battle over the President's court bill ended with its advocates sighing in relief and its foes crediting the victory to public sentiment. One after another of the opponents followed Senator Wheeler (D) of Montana, in confirming his victory note of:

"The American people have won a great victory for an independent judiciary. They realized that this bill, laying the groundwork for political control of our courts, would have led only to the loss of all our hard-won liberties. It was a victory for the people."

The death-blow came when Senator Logan (D) of Kentucky, staunch administration supporter, moved to recommit the bill. His motion was adopted 70 to 20, with even Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, the newly-elected Democratic floor leader, supporting it.

This action of Logan and Barkley in helping to recommit the bill served to heal some of the wounds incurred during the long battle.

Vice-President Garner was credited wholly with having ended the fight so peacefully. He arranged the terms under which the administration abandoned the original bill and agreed to let the opponents "write their own ticket." He also was credited with leading the move to complete the program and adjourn August 15.

The Senate Judiciary Committee meanwhile was working upon the substitute bill. It probably will provide for a direct appeal from lower courts to the Supreme Court in cases involving the constitutionality of federal legislation, authority for the Attorney General to intervene in such cases and authority for senior circuit court justices to reassign judges within their districts. All provisions, relating to the Supreme Court will be banned.

Branch Valley Game Ass'n Offers Prizes for Fish; 1800 Are Caught

GAUGE PLANT PICNIC

PERKASIE, July 23—A total of 1,800 fish were caught this week in the Horn quarry tract, when the Branch Valley Fish, Game and Forestry Association opened its propagation pond at that point for public fishing.

The number was divided between more than 100 fishermen, competing for prizes offered by the association for largest specimens. Each individual was permitted to keep three.

Many sunfish measuring seven or eight inches were caught, while the catfish measuring up to ten or eleven inches were also numerous. A rifle was awarded to Stewart Groff, of this place for catching the largest catfish, eleven and five-eights inches in length.

Rev. William Delp, Hatfield, received a reel for catching the second largest catfish only an eighth of an inch shorter than Groff's. The largest sunfish, nine inches long, was caught by James Ziegenfuss, Sellersville, who was rewarded with a fly rod and reel. Earl Schwager, of this place, also won a fly rod.

SELLERSVILLE, July 23—A picnic will be indulged in tomorrow by employees of the United States Gauge Plant, together with their families, at Dorney Park, Allentown.

The committee, following the picnic last year, decided an ordinary sized park was not big enough to give ample room for all. This fact became apparent three Summers ago when a heavy thunder shower threatened to mar the picnic at Hallman's Grove, Skippack. Last year the event proved a huge success at Dorney Park.

More than 2,400 people connected with the gauge plant will participate in the affair, which will start with a bus and motor convoy at 9 a. m. in Sellersville and end at 10 o'clock or later in Allentown that night.

CHALFONT, July 23—The Republican caucus of this borough was conducted last evening in the Hotel Kelly, at which time the ticket was acted upon for the primary election, September 14th.

Offices to be filled include: Burgess, justice of the peace, tax collector, two school directors, four councilmen, auditor, judge of elections, and inspector of election.

"NEW TONE" ASSUMED BY BRITAIN WITH EUROPE'S "HARD GUYS;" LETS BOYS KNOW THAT IF IT COMES TO POINT OF FIGHTING SHE PLANS TO BE IN THE FRAY

Eden's Sharp Warning to Mussolini, Hitler and Franco Stems Directly From the Gigantic British Rearmament Scheme, Says Prominent Writer

(Editor's Note: How Britain's monster rearmament program has made it possible for British Foreign Secretary Eden to take a firm tone with Europe's "hard guys" is disclosed today in the following dramatic analysis of latest developments on the European diplomatic stage, with war-torn Spain as the back-drop.

H. R. Knickerbocker, ace International News Service correspondent, reveals how Eden's sharp warning to Mussolini, Hitler and rebel Spain's Franco stems directly from the gigantic British rearmament scheme. In a brilliant series of articles just published, Knickerbocker revealed the tremendous scope of Britain's rearmament, terming it the most vital development in present-day Europe. Now he shows how Britain's readiness to fight for her interests confirms these searching disclosures.)

LONDON, July 23—(INS)—Britain took a new tone today with Europe's "hard guys" for the first time since her humiliating defeat over Ethiopia two years ago.

She let the boys know that if it comes to fighting she will be in it.

This was the meaning that a sobered Europe read into the statement of suave, diplomatic Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, and that the chairman's subcommittees of the Non-Intervention Committee had before it.

In essence the question is peace or war. Every likelihood is, now that the issues have been put so clearly by a nation whose potential power is rapidly pouring its potency into overwhelming military might, the choice of Europe will be for peace.

If the choice is not for peace, then Britain will defend its interests, said Eden, and that is as near as any diplomat comes to saying his country will fight.

The entire European family attended with mixed feelings to Eden's meticulously phrased but clear statement of Britain's position.

Its sense was first, that if the non-intervention committee does not come to an agreement, there would be a complete breakdown of control of shipments of men and arms to Spain.

Second, such a breakdown would lead inevitably to international war.

Third, the chief arena of any such war would necessarily be the Mediterranean.

Fourth, Britain's interests in the Mediterranean are vital and she will defend them to her full power.

Paraphrased, Eden's statement was that of a gentleman tired of being pushed around, who, using the language of those doing the pushing, cried:

"Give me that back, and I mean quick!" to rebel generalissimo Francisco Franco, who had seized a British vessel.

"Watch your step in the Mediterranean and Red Sea!" he told Premier Mussolini.

"Take a deep breath and think it over!" he told Chancellor Hitler.

None of this firmness was visible in British policy two years ago when Italy defied her to halt the war in Ethiopia.

Today the governments of 26 European powers discerned in it the unmistakable influence of Britain's monster rearmament program. Although she has only begun to rearm in the air, she has so far improved her navy that today she can speak to Italy with the confidence born of knowledge that she has a fleet with perhaps 50 per cent more striking power than in 1935.

And, more important, she knows that in the Spanish dispute she has solidly behind her France, with whose navy combined Britain could make short shrift of Italy.

Eden's resolute statement could have no less effect upon Germany, whose superior air force does not compensate for the fact her navy is in embryo and Britain's could wipe it out before it reached infancy.

Upon Franco the British demand for release of the seized freighter Molton came as a blow which could only prudently be answered by immediate compliance.

Not since Britain laid down her arms after the war has the British government spoken with such vigor. The prestige of this country, which suffered so greatly in the Ethiopian conflict, already has been considerably revived by this first diplomatic evidence of the effect of rearmament.

Hopes now are strengthened that the period of tension between the announcement and completion of the British rearmament program may yet be passed without a conflict and that the coming autumn crops may be gathered without the dreaded aftermath of war.

"ART OF GRAFTING" IS PRESENTED TO SOCIETY

Trevose Horticultural Group Hears Talk by Robert McKinney, Newtown

TREVOSE, July 23—A talk on "The Art of Grafting" by Robert McKenney, Newtown; and showing of a sound motion picture by a representative of a steamship line, marked the highlights of the monthly meeting of Trevose Horticultural Society, Tuesday evening. The session was in the community house.

The speaker of the evening, Mr. McKinney, told that the science of grafting must be as old as civilization. "In all very old literature the subject is mentioned with widely different views on the matter. An important fact to remember in the art of grafting is that a tree can only heal at the cambium, that layer of tissue that lies between the wood and the bark of trees. Therefore, in making a graft be sure that cambium meets cambium." He demonstrated the grafting of a tree peony into the root of a herbaceous peony. A cherry graft is very hard to make grow because of the way the bark grows around the tree or branch. This pulls apart when the graft begins to swell. For this reason budding is used on the cherry tree rather than the graft.

In England they graft peach trees onto apricot trees because of the fact that the apricot lives many years long-

EXONERATE DRIVER IN DEATH OF I. LIPPINCOTT

Coroner's Jury Finds Accident Unavoidable; L. J. Pryor Released

SEVERAL WITNESSES

Louis J. Pryor, 30, Fourth avenue, Croydon, was exonerated by a coroner's jury, yesterday, when an inquisition was conducted into the death of Isaac E. Lippincott, 628 Bath street. Pryor had been released under bail on a charge of involuntary manslaughter.

Lippincott died June 29th as the result of a fractured skull, sustained on June 28th, when he was struck by an automobile operated by Pryor. The accident occurred on State Road, just West of Cedar avenue, Croydon.

The inquest was held in the municipal building, with Bucks County Coroner Dr. H. Clayton Moyer presiding. Members of the jury who found from the evidence presented that the accident was unavoidable, were: Evan Vandegrift, foreman; John Schaffer, Alexander Dougherty, Lloyd Yoder, Damon Jobson, John Breece.

In addition to the driver of the car, seven others took the stand. These included the officer who investigated the case, Constable Joseph Seader, Bristol Township; Dr. James Lawler, deputy coroner of Bucks county; and five young men who were near the scene of the accident.

Lippincott, who was employed as a watchman on a PWA project at State Road and the Neshaminy Creek bridge, Croydon, had just left a bus at State Road and Cedar avenue, and commenced walking down State Road to take his post for the night. The accident occurred at about 11.45, it was testified, and weather conditions were described at bad, fog being encountered in "spots."

The five young men near the crash scene at the time of the fatal accident, were: James Robinson, George Elfrey, Arthur States, Lewis Beisel, Jr., of Croydon; and William Unckel, Eddington. Each of the five gave approximately the same testimony, telling of seeing Lippincott leave the bus. Only one actually saw the car strike Lippincott. He testified that Lippincott was on the righ-hand side of the road, but well out on the "crown." The quintet stated that Pryor, driver of the car, slowed his vehicle at the corner of State Road and Cedar avenue, and that he was not traveling over 20 or 25 miles an hour when he hit Lippincott.

They stated there were no street lights at the scene of the tragedy, and that the weather was misty or foggy in spots.

In taking the stand, Pryor told the coroner and the jury he had been driving a car for 13 years, and had never had an accident. He informed that the man seemed to loom suddenly, and that he (Pryor) swerved to the left of the road-way to avoid striking the man, but was unable to avoid hitting Lippincott. Pryor told that he stopped the car so quickly the injured Bristolian was lying just alongside the vehicle.

GIVE ATTENDANCE RECORDS FOR YEAR, BENSALEM SCHOOLS

177 Students Went Through Term Without Missing A Single Session

95 GIRLS AND 82 BOYS

Many on List Lived at Distance From Schools; 1472 Were Enrolled

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, July 23—A survey of the attendance records for the public schools in Bensalem Township for the past school year, which were recently released by superintendent of schools, Samuel K. Faust, indicates that a total of 177 students went through the entire year without missing a day.

This figure compares favorably with last year's totals and with other school districts throughout the county. Of the total there were 95 girls to win perfect attendance recognition, while only 82 boys has a perfect attendance record.

Mr. Faust pointed out that many of the students who attained a year of perfect attendance lived at some distance from the schools. He also stated that the system of bus transportation supplied on many of the routes was responsible for students making perfect attendance marks. "These children," he said, "know that they must be at a certain spot at a certain time and over a period of time they are able to regulate their movements accordingly." Mr. Faust pointed out that there were 1,472 students enrolled in the township schools during last term. Of this number there were 745 girls and 727 boys.

The high school at Cornwells Heights led in number of students having perfect attendance, with a total of 68. There were 49 students in the primary grades at the Cornwells school who also had perfect records. Trevose was second with 24, while Andalusia had 20 perfect attendances. Eddington had 13 while the Penn Valley school trailed with three perfect records.

For many of the students who were honored this term the honor becomes a repetition, since some of them have gone several years in succession without being absent. Those finishing their first year were given certificates. Seals may then be won in succeeding years to place on these certificates.

Among the students who were present every day last year were: Eddington: Grades 1-3, David Dallas, John Raupp, Florence Sotteng, Neil Moeller, Stephen Dallas; grades 4-6, Allan Blythe, Richard Hunter, Harry Shapcott, Carroll Thomas, Paul Mellor, Francis Garr, Charles Graffalner, Dorothy Thomas.

Andalusia: grade 1, Arthur Diamanti; grades 2-3, James Dunner, John Ferguson, Joan Edelman, Catharine Fries, Elaine Jackson, Regina Vickers; grades 4-6, Rita Blosch, Richard Vickers, George Geiges, Robert Scheer, Marie Adams, Stanley Parr, Robert Edelman; grades 6-7, Clara Fries, Rodman Fries, Elmer Geiges, David Kish, Melber Schmid, Albert Vickers.

"Joe Cabanna" To Be Given A Hearing Here Today

A hearing in the case of George Bowen, 28, of Chelsea, Mass., alias Joe Cabanna, is scheduled for early this afternoon at the municipal building.

Bowen, who yesterday confessed to Boston, Mass., police, that he took part in the $7,200 hold-up at the plant of Lucius Beebe Company, Inc., was brought to Bristol last evening by Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo and Chief of Police Linford J. Jones. The two officers and their prisoner, who made the trip from Boston to Trenton, N. J., by train, were met in Trenton by Corporal Herman of the Doylestown state police station, who brought them by automobile to this borough. Bowen was lodged in the local police station to await a hearing today.

Extradition papers were secured by Detective Russo in Harrisburg, Tuesday, and upon his arrival in Boston he was informed that Bowen or "Cabanna" had waived extradition.

Bowen, in his confession to police, is said to have implicated five others in the hold-up. Bowen said he received only $200 as his share.

10 YEARS' PROGRESS

Though not so intended, the double East and West crossing of the Atlantic by two large commercial planes forms the sort of flying which appropriately celebrates Colonel Lindbergh's epochal flight from New York to Paris 10 years ago. Care for the minute preparations alike characterize the American ace's successes and the establishment of transoceanic air services.

Since blazoning his name in history, by first riding the complete arc across the most turbulent ocean, Lindbergh has devoted himself to furthering the progress of aviation as a substantial transportation service. The most travelled is the ocean route as yet unserved by air. These ships, one American and one British, taking the air together and passing in mid-ocean, recorded a fine international co-operation and of the engineering and flying skill which now builds 23-ton ships and navigates them with precision.

A first preliminary test, it will be observed, has been successfully made. More are planned; regular service is not contemplated until next spring. Pioneering paved the way, then, besides daring skill, engineering and infinite pains carry on. The best commemoration of the pioneering reduces the risks to the minimum and marks another step of substantial progress.

COUNT THEM YOURSELF

There are 154 different jobs to be done on a farm, declares a recent book, intending to portray the complexity of farm life. The estimate is conservative. Take corn.

The farmer plows his ground. He harrows the ground and rolls it. He selects his seed corn, shells it, puts it in a machine and plants it. For two months he cultivates the growing crop. Then he husks it, hauls it to the barn and shovels it into a crib. Over a period of several months he takes it out in baskets and carries it to the pigs.

Along in the fall when the pigs are fat he slays them, hangs them up by the heels, dresses them and dismembers them. The hams (to consider only a single part) he rubs with salt, hangs in the smoke house, and in an open stove beneath them builds a smouldering fire of sweet hickory or maple. When the hams are well smoked he encloses them in sacks and stores them in a cool dark place.

Then in the course of the winter he takes the hams out one by one and carves slices off them to eat with his breakfast eggs. Thus the corn cycle is completed. The corn becomes farmer. And the farmer acquires strength to go out and plow his field again.

The gentleman who wrote this book has wielded a pen more than a hoe. The actual number of jobs on a farm is 154,000.

Funny man! He wouldn't ask a merchant friend to give him a pound of butter, but he expects a doctor friend to give him free advice.

Painters in New Jersey painted the wrong house, and wreckers in Norfolk tore the wrong one down. But, as our President once bravely said, if it doesn't work, we'll try something else.

An educated person is one who can spell harass, supersede, embarrass, inoculate, vilify, desiccate, picnicking, plaguy and innuendo.

New Hospitalization Plan Told To Club-Men of the Plan by saying, "while you are earning normal income—while expenses are ordinary, too—you set aside a few pennies a day for the 'rainy day' that catches up with all of us, sooner or later. Then when you or a member of your family need expert, modern hospital attention, that care and treatment is waiting for you."

"You can now protect yourself and your family against having to pay hospital bills. All you have to do is join the Abington Hospitalization Plan," Mr. Lange said.

"Members of this Plan, by setting aside a few pennies a day, become pay-your-way semi-private patients when they need hospital care. They are cared for by their own physicians, in the hospital of their choice.

"Individuals, married couples and entire families are eligible for membership. There are a minimum of rules and regulation. No medical examination is required and there is no red tape. It is necessary merely for members to declare their belief that they are in normal health at the time of joining the Plan."

Speaking of the origin of the Plan Mr. Lange said that this particular plan originated with the Medical and Surgical Staff of Abington Memorial Hospital and it was then in turn approved by the Montgomery County Medical Society, the State Medical Society's committee on medical economics, and the Board of Trustees of the Abington Memorial Hospital.

"The practicality of this and similar plans," Mr. Lange said, "has been demonstrated in scores of typical American communities, including New York, Cleveland, Elizabeth, Dallas, Kansas City, Newark, St. Paul, New Orleans, Washington, Fort Worth and Los Angeles. Almost every week brings the announcement of the installation of a comparable plan somewhere in the nation.

"More than 1,200,000 men, women and their dependent children are protected by similar plans in the United States today. In the city of London, England, almost 1,000,000 persons belong to a hospitalization group.

"Now for the first time the benefits and protection of this Plan are available to residents in the Philadelphia area."

Discussing the ways in which a member of the Plan benefits Mr. Lange said, "although the average hospital stay is from 10 to 12 days, this Plan affords 21 days of care in any given year. Service includes, in addition to bed and board in semi-private accommodations: regular nursing, ordinary medications and dressings, routine laboratory examinations, general anesthesia, and the use of ambulance, operating room, delivery room and nursery, as required.

"In fact, it covers all charges ordinarily made for such care and treatment, excepting only fees to members of the medical profession.

"Should you wish to occupy a private room rather than a semi-private one, you may do so by paying the difference between the regular rates.

"Maternity care is extended to wives who with their husbands are members, providing they have held membership for 11 consecutive months prior to admission to the hospital.

If for any reason you prefer to go to some other non-profit hospital anywhere in the world, Abington Memorial Hospital will pay that hospital $6.50 a day for as long as 21 days, and $1.50 for each day you are a patient, for seven additional weeks. After the 21-day period, if the patient is in Abington Memorial Hospital, a discount of 25 percent from its regular rates for seven additional weeks will be allowed."

In closing the speaker said that it is a plan that will aid thousands of persons. "No one in a metropolitan area in America need be denied the best hospital care," Mr. Lange said. "Even the destitute receive it, in charity wards. This Plan is not for them. It is for the vast majority of us who, neither very rich nor very poor, want to pay our way, but sometimes find it difficult to do."

"ROULETTE of LOVE" by MAY CHRISTIE

SYNOPSIS

Ten days after beautiful Lucinda Stanford's meeting with wealthy Carter Chalaire, he confesses his love for her. However, socially prominent Zita Van Vorst has her cap set for Carter with the approval of his mother. Lucinda is happy in the thought that Carter wants to marry her but her heart sinks when, in reply to the question as to what his mother will say, he replies: "Mother needn't know a thing about it. What's it got to do with my family?" Then, one night, Carter does not appear. The next evening, Lucinda learns from Bubbles, her gold-digging sister, that Carter is to marry Zita. The same night, Carter calls but says nothing of his engagement although he speaks of the futility of life and how when one really begins to learn what happiness means something bobs up to spoil it. Carter induces Lucinda to go to Lake Mahopac for the week-end. As a result, she loses her position as an advertisement writer, but secures another as hostess at a fashionable gambling establishment. One evening, Carter visits the club while intoxicated and loses $20,000. Later, he hears the proprietor tell Lucinda that her commission on the loss is $400. Although she is innocent, Carter believes Lucinda framed him and breaks with her. His engagement to Zita is announced.

CHAPTER XI

It was a beautiful wedding at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Zita Van Vorst—now Zita Chalaire—made a stunning looking bride. The paper raved about her.

Carter looked very serious, but extraordinarily handsome, too, in the wedding pictures.

With a veil over her face, Lucinda—heart-broken but irresistibly drawn to the spot, in the same manner that one bites on an aching tooth—from the sidewalk saw the guests go in and out of the church, and the bride and groom. . . .

It was like a terrible dream to her. She moved like an automaton.

Bubbles had sympathized with Lucinda, perhaps at heart a little remorseful that she had indirectly been a cause in the rift between the lovers, since—through her acquaintance with Cambericas—Lucinda had got a job in the gambling-house.

"Tough luck, baby! That's life! What is to be, is to be." That, and other platitudes, did nothing to ameliorate the situation. Lucinda remained distraite and wretched.

Bubbles become impatient.

"I'd show a little pride, if I were you. I wouldn't let any man wreck my life, least of all that poppinjay! Mother's darling boy!" she mimicked. "I'll bet that stuck-up cat of a Zita will make him step! She'll lead him a dance, if I'm not mistaken—and serve him right too!"

The financial situation went from bad to worse, for the two sisters. Cambericas, furious that Carter's father had notified the bank to stop payment on the boy's gambling checks for $20,000 (which was perfectly in order, since gambling is illegal) refused to do anything further for Bubbles.

"And everyone else I know is as broke as we are ourselves!" Bubbles wailed. "If you'd an inch of spirit, Lucinda, instead of moping around, you'd bring a breach-of-promise action against Carter! You bet his old man would have to shell out, to stop the scandal!"

But Lucinda turned a deaf ear to her sister's suggestions.

Bubbles became so irritable and restless that the little flat became a doubly miserable abode.

It was not a great shock to Lucinda—although she was terribly concerned for her sister's future—to find, one evening when she returned from a fruitless search for work, Bubbles' clothes gone from the apartment, and a scribbled note lying on the table.

"I'm off with X. Shall be gone a couple of months anyway. I hope longer. The boat will be going down the bay as you read this, so don't rush to the dock, for it will be too late to stop me. X— promises me a swell time. I borrowed your fitted suitcase. Good luck. Stop moping, and follow my example.

"Bubbles."

Three days later, Lucinda got a job as salesgirl in the basement of a large, cheap store.

The August days were blazing. Lucinda escaped from the annealing heat, although she seldom saw the sun. The work was almost beyond her strength, yet she was glad to have it, not only because it provided a meagre living for her, but because there was no time to brood on Carter . . .

Bubbles went off with X—— leaving a note for Lucinda.

One day Bertie Sprigg, the indigent Englishman to whom any form of work was anathema, dropped into the store to see her, and—wonders of wonders!—even bought an iced drink for her at the soda-fountain! This was the first time that Lucinda had ever known him to spend a nickel on anybody but himself!

"I say, the fair Zita isn't turning out exactly what you'd call a jolly old home-bird . . . I mean, she rather declines to decorate the domestic hearth! I was in the 'Merry-Go-Round' yesterday — that adorable speak where the jolly old bar revolves like a spinning top—Zita was spinning around with a good-looking Argentine dancer—I call it a bit thick on young Carter!"

"Was he there too?" Lucinda forced herself to ask, through dry lips.

"Not at all. He's working hard downtown. Rumor has it that the bally old firm is a bit rocky."

"But his father is a millionaire—"

"I say, that doesn't mean a thing these days! What with the jolly old market bouncing up and down, it's here today and gone tomorrow!"

Ensued a pause. Then Lucinda asked, shyly: "Bertie, do you ever see Carter?"

"I saw him at the Embassy Club directly after they returned from their honeymoon. They were only away ten days, you know. They went on his yacht, and Zita got seasick, or sick of the sea, or maybe—haw! haw! haw!—sick of Carter!"

"Did—did he seem happy, Bertie?" Oh, this was terribly undignified, this questioning—but she must know.

"He was tight as a lord, my dear! Ab-so-lute-ly blotto! Rather indelicate for a bridegroom in his first public appearance after the jolly old honeymoon! But I understand it wasn't so jolly as one might think. What ho!"

"You mean—they aren't getting along as well as they might? Is that it, Bertie?"

"I mean, the fair Zita is a bit of a hell-cat! Haven't met her myself, but I know several of her so-called friends. By the way, she was hung like a plush horse with the Chalaire family jewels! It seems that Mrs. Chalaire Senior, whose health is pretty wonky, has given them to her daughter-in-law in custody. Or so the report goes. By the way, they're living in a gorgeous Park Avenue apartment! Zita selected all the furniture herself. I understand that when they got back from the honeymoon, there was a deuce of a row over the bills!"

Going home on the Elevated that night, Lucinda was shocked to read of the sudden death of Mrs. Chalaire Senior, from heart failure.

When she arrived at her solitary little apartment, to her surprise she found Bertie Sprigg on the doorstep, waiting for her.

He, too, had an evening paper. He had come to expatiate on this news-item, and was disappointed that already Lucinda had read it.

"After I left you today, I dropped in for a jolly old game of pool at the Yale Club," he announced, sinking on Lucinda's couch in the living-room and elegantly draping his long legs over the rear end. "There was a chap there who'd been dining at the Chalaire's place at Hewlett last night, just before the poor old lady kicked the bucket."

Lucinda murmured: "Oh, Bertie, you use such dreadful expressions—"

"But apt, my dear child—apt," said Bertie, lighting his pipe and warming to his theme. "Now this chap at the Yale Club is young—but quite a financier. The Chalaires, père et fils, were evidently seeking his advice or help in some manner. Zita was there too. But when it came to the nuts and port, she wisely left them to it, and vamoosed upstairs to her mother-in-law. She wasn't as tactful there as she'd been below, it seems. In fact, she started an awful argument with the old lady."

"What happened?" breathed Lucinda.

"Well, the old lady telephoned from her bedside to have both her husband and her son come up at once. I heard this chap saying so. Zita had started some row, and was right in the middle of it when they arrived. It seems the old lady had been moved into a room directly over the diningroom, and this chap could hear the back-wash of a complete shindy, and the four of them going at it, hammer and tongs!"

"And—and she died directly after?"

"Right in the middle of it—from heart failure," Bertie said succinctly.

GRUNDY'S vs. HIBERNIANS
(Leedom's Field)
Umpire, Kervick; scorer, Tomlinson
SUPERIOR vs. ROHM & HAAS
(Maple Beach)
Umpire, Fields; scorer: Dolan

The St. Ann's team "blew up" in the fifth inning of their game with the Odd Fellows last evening on Leedom's field with the result that the Oddies tallied four times which was enough to give them a 5-2 triumph and increase their edge on first place in the Twilight League race.

Three errors and three hits gave the Radcliffe Street clan its victory and until this canto they had made but one run and a lone hit off the hooks of Charlie Whyno. The hit coupled with two passes in the third had scored an Odd Fellows run which deadlocked the count.

Previous to the fifth, Whyno had fanned the last two hitters in the fourth but Snyder opened with a single to center. Langdon beat out a hit past Sagolla and on the first-sacker's error each runner advanced a base. G. Ritter grounded out, Cooper reached base on an error by Bauroth, a run scoring. L. Hibbs hit to Bauroth and Langdon was forced at third. On Tosti's error of Dewsnap's grounder, Cooper and L. Hibbs crossed. Dewsnap scored on a bingle by Freddie Hibbs. B. Ritter ended it by flying out to center.

Hal Snyder did the twirling for the winners and limited the Saints to five hits. Two of these, a single by Dougherty and double by Sagolla produced a St. Ann's run in the second while in the last half of the sixth, DeRisi reached base on an error, got out on Dougherty's fielder's choice and the latter scored when Ihrig planted the pill in right for two sacks. Snyder walked two batters.

It was the seventh win of the second half for the Suttonmen against one defeat. Their lead on first place is one and one-half games with the Hibernians in second place. This evening the Grundy team which has won three straight will meet the Hibs in an effort to climb into second place.

MOBILE FISHING RODEO SCHEDULED FOR AUG. 9

MOBILE, Ala., July 23—(INS)—The "Rose Bowl" of the Izaak Waltonites will get underway here August 9 and continue for three days. By train, plane, automobile, bus and by boat fishermen from throughout the United States will converge on Mobile bay for the ninth annual Alabama Deep Sea Fishing Rodeo to compete for the honor of catching the prize fish of the year.

This event, started as an experiment, has become one of the prize national fishing tournaments of the nation.

Fully 1,000 contestants are expected to participate this year as fishermen go out into the bay searching for prize tarpon, devil-fish, channel bass, and others. Last year, contestants registered from 34 states.

The Alabama Deep Sea Rodeo was conceived back in 1928 by L. F. Quinn, state conservation commissioner. In those days operators of boats for fishing were hard hit financially.

So Commissioner Quinn hit upon the idea of stimulating business for them by staging a tournament which would create interest in fishing in the bay throughout the year. At the time he had no idea the tournament would expand into a national affair.

POLICE CIVILITY ASSURED

BOSTON—(INS)—Summer visitors to this city are assured of courteous treatment by the police.

In personal letters to each of the 2,200 patrolmen and officers, Commissioner Joseph F. Timilty asked for "courtesy, patience and civility" towards thousands of visitors who come here.

PORT RICHMOND LOSES NIGHT GAME TO "SEEDS"

Inaugurating night baseball at their grounds in Philadelphia last night the Port Richmond club, pace setters of the Philadelphia League, were defeated by Landreth Seeds 7-3.

Howard Black, pitching for the "Farmers" under the lights for the first time, held the home club to seven hits; one a fluke homer by Pino in the fourth inning, a ground ball which bounced by Lodge.

Major McDonald for the home club pitched good ball in the early innings but was clubbed hard in the final rounds by the visitors. George Dougherty led the hitters for the visitors, making four hits out of five trips to the platter, two being for extra bases.

Pino's catch of a long drive from the bat of Griggs in deep centre field in the eighth inning, was easily the fielding feature.

Landreth's plays Kensington in Philadelphia this evening at D and Tioga streets.
